

PARKERISMS

SHORT PARAGRAPHS FROM THE ABLE PEN OF SAMUEL PARKER

Parkerette paragraphs plainly put. Reading may keep (lift) you out of a rut. Something to think of, you'll find, no doubt. Nothing, I hope, to get mad about.

The "Kiss and Make Up" court of this county is one of our most valuable assets for the promotion of marital well being. It seems to be the business of this court to hold those together who should never pull apart and two or three successful cases reported wherein marital vows were taken anew speaks success for this court and desire for more like it. Nothing speaks of a deplorable condition of society like a crowded divorce court.

If our "Uncle Samuel" is conscious it must have pleased him greatly to have seen such devotion manifested to his pocket handkerchief among his subjects from President Wilson down to the baby tot of a foreign-born citizen who vied with a native in fidelity to our flag. What a floodtide of speeches and song and the end is not yet. The glorious Fourth is close at hand.

President Wilson, Bryan, Roosevelt and Taft have each in turn and within recent period given utterance to the loftiest "peace" sentiments, and so similar that neither party would suffer by an interchange. The jingo editors and orators may see great opportunity to discriminate between these patriotic official and unofficial citizens, but any forceful list of peace men will contain them.

How Jas. R. Mann, long a congressman from Illinois, and ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, member-elect to congress, were both in Los Angeles recently at practically the same time and yet no mountain leaped from its fastness into the Pacific because of their presence. Congressman Mann, who is Republican leader of congress, held a gum shoe seance with a few party men, and "Uncle Joe" seemed anxious only to find some conveyance in which he could smoke while riding to the San Diego fair.

How would you like to live in South Dakota where if the people thought it worth while to get up at all yesterday morning they wrestled with the inconveniences associated with a foot fall of snow. Think of the shoveling of sidewalks, the sweeping off of steps, the slush and sloop as the melting time came and conclude to let the other fellow live there.

Said she—"The prefix pretty as so generally applied to all sorts and conditions of womankind is so common as to be meaningless, almost offensive to good taste, and its omission should be coveted rather than its use. In a general sense all women are fair looking, few very few, are ravishingly beautiful, and these are discounted when every one is dabbled by the reportorial "pretty sick."

Turn your back to the sea and eliminate the mountains from your vision, and you can at this time on steam, electric line or auto cavort over wide stretches of Southern California, reminding you of similar outlooks in the middle west. The lacking feature would be growing corn, but that is more than usual in evidence this year. Hay and small grains show well here.

The Webb-Kenyon Prohibitory law indicted the Adams Express Co. for shipping liquor from Tennessee into Kentucky on individual orders in the state courts, but the liquor interests took the case to the United States supreme court which holds that the personal trade is no violation of the Webb-Kenyon act. Now "watch us grow" from bottle, keg, barrel, truck, car train load, all for the personal use of one ordering. Meantime prohibition is marching on.

Many years ago in Chicago my business required a rush for the hand-turned bridge, when the bell rang in order to make time. On one occasion I cut in ahead of a heavy truck with my light rig when the truck driver yelled "Look out, old man, or you'll lose a wheel." I looked around for the "Old Man." I found him. It was the first time the term had ever been applied to me. The sensation was novel. He had measured me by my turning hair.

A strange but fatal malady seems ranging in the air, anent an up-state primary in other things quite fair. The teacher is a good one and

"THE LOVE ROUTE" IS THE FEATURE FILM AT PALACE GRAND TONIGHT

Without doubt a packed house will witness the great romantic film feature produced by the Famous Players Film Co. at the Palace Grand tonight.

Thousands have enjoyed this picture.

The central theme is devoted to the romance between a young girl, the owner of a Western ranch, and the civil engineer of a local railroad company which intends to build a line across the ranch. This act the girl spiritedly attempts to prevent, in spite of her great love for the young engineer. From the very beginning of the feud between the families of the girl and the engineer, through the many conflicts between the two characters themselves, and until the very thrilling climax and sympathetic ending, the action is replete with exciting events.

During the development of the plot the action calls for the physical building of a railroad, seen in a dramatic photoplay for the first time in the history of motion pictures. The actual construction of the road, from its very troublesome beginning to its very exciting completion, is depicted on the screen. Careful study has been given to this difficult part of the film, and the result will make audiences gasp at the remarkable effect produced on the screen.

This novel feature, combined with a very effectively chosen cast, and the tender romance that is interwoven with the more forceful action of the plot, gives the subject a variety of interest seldom seen in a photoplay, and Runaway Leopard, the greatest animal comedy ever filmed.

RANDALL TO SPEAK

The friends of Congressman Randall have arranged to have him speak in Glendale High School on Tuesday, June 29, at 8 o'clock. Everybody is invited. An interesting address is expected.

starts in, oh, so fine, but soon unto the board she writes, "My place I here resign." And thus she wrote the board today, leaving it in a fix, and this the entry the clerk made, and she was "number 6." The outlines of the malady are very hard to trace. "Paid off, dismissed, got married" in every single case. Hold on, my friend, the place is filled, at least it was today, and real full are the roads now leading up that way.

COURT IN HOSPITAL

GLENDALE RECORDER LISTENS TO EVIDENCE AT BEDSIDE OF WOUNDED MAN

One of those horrible tragedies which so often follow a drink debauch took place on the outskirts of Glendale not many weeks ago. Marcello Torres and Camillo Delgado, good enough friends, met one Saturday evening and, taking counsel, decided that it would be well to celebrate their meeting and seal their friendship in wine. They procured several bottles of the liquor that is red. It moved itself aright and gave its color in the cup, and true to its ancient character, the treacherous juice of the grape at the last bit like a serpent and stung like an adder.

From joke and laugh and song the fraternizing friends began to get irritable. Little things grated on their nerves; innocent words acquired a sinister significance. Disputes began to arise and from words the disputants at last came to deeds. Delgado, maddened by some fancied slight, trembling with rage and almost inarticulate with resentment, rushed into his cabin with a rifle and fired at Torres.

It was all over in a second, but a lifetime will not suffice to blot out that horrible moment. Torres lay on the ground for some time helpless and bleeding. Delgado was fleeing for his life. The police arrived on the scene, Torres was removed to the County hospital and Delgado, stealthily creeping back to his cabin to get money wherewith to escape, was arrested and taken to jail.

See now the tragedy of the wine cup. Torres is lying in the County hospital, on the eve of having his leg amputated. The 30x30 bullet smashed the knee bone into a hundred fragments. He is in a dangerous condition and even amputation may not save him. Should he die Delgado will be tried for murder in the second degree.

Poor Torres—wretched Delgado! Standing in the iron cell in Glendale jail yesterday the unfortunate prisoner was permitted to speak to his wife, who stood beside the inexorable bars silently weeping. His little baby in his mother's arms stretched out little hands to the miserable father, who frantically kissed his child's fingers. For a moment they were almost happy, but between them ever fell the dark shadow of that awful hour when the drink that had converted rational men into fiends swept down on their domestic happiness and whirled it away forever.

It is feared that Torres may die. He is in wretched shape. He is a simple, quiet, inoffensive being; so is Delgado. The tragedy that has cast its shadow on their lives is the upas shade of drink that has blighted so many homes and blasted so many hopes. Nothing can ever put these men back again into the position they once occupied. Torres may live, but he will huddle about a lame man all his days. Delgado may get off with a few years' imprisonment, but his wife must then go her own way and the little baby whom he fondled through the prison bars will grow up without a father's care or a father's love. What a lesson!

Judge Whomes held his court at the wounded and possibly dying man's bedside yesterday. The testimony given was plain enough and pointed inevitably to the guilt of Delgado. There was nothing to say. The law awaits the outcome of Torres' amputation. Delgado is back in the county jail; his wife and baby are alone.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Those who have not reserved seats for the commencement at the Union High school tonight will do well to be down in time for the opening of the exercises. There is certain to be a very big crowd and it is doubtful if there will be room for all who want to attend. The audience that filled the auditorium on Sunday night and overflowed into the corridor is an example of the interest that is being taken in the class of 1915. It is a large class and even the immediate friends of the graduates would suffice to fill the auditorium should they all come out.

Dr. Ethelbert D. Warfield, who will give the address of the evening, "A Liberal Education," comes with a reputation as an interesting and instructive speaker.

In weeks the world has heard no brighter, more welcome news than that the United States is consistently disposed toward peace with all the world and that the American farmer is producing a billion-bushel crop of wheat.

ALL LIFE IS A GAME

CONTEST INFLUENCE EXHILARATING—THINK HOW YOU'D FEEL IF YOU WON

All this life is but a game. Nothing is absolutely certain. Nearly all start out with the ambition to win fame and fortune, the prizes in the battle of life, the struggle for existence. All do not win the first prizes, but a great majority get something that is worth while. The element of chance and the thrill of the struggle is what makes life worth living.

So it is with a contest. The exhilarating influence of a contest of any kind is one of the charms that life holds out, in fact, every day life is made up of one great series of contests in which you win or lose. Since the beginning of history, down through all ages, and we have it strongly developed in modern times, in work and play, in sport and politics, the spirit of contest has been one of the strongest characteristics of the human race.

That's why some of the most energetic and ambitious people in this vicinity are going to enter the Evening News Great $2000 Popularity Contest. They realize that for nearly ten short weeks their every faculty will be brought to bear in the race for their share of the $2000 in prizes that will be awarded.

While a small number have already sent in their nominations, there still remains a marvelous opportunity for those who have thus far hesitated. A contest of this nature appeals to many—scores think they will enter, but put the matter off, and but few actually enter the lists. Be one of the fortunate ones and enter this "battle of ballots" now while it is yet young. Be successful and feel the triumphant joy that only victory can bring.

The prizes are well worth working for. The grand prize, the $850 Maxwell Touring Car, was purchased right here in Glendale of the Jno. A. Pirtle Maxwell and King Agency, and is a car that any one would be proud to own. And if you don't feel the need of an auto, well, you know what the cash value of a brand new, fully equipped $850 Maxwell is. The second prize, a $400 Schiller piano, is a well-known piano from one of the biggest factories in the United States. The trip to the exposition will include expense money for a week's stay. And the reputation of the Isaac Woodbury College of Los Angeles is well known. The News gives three $75 business courses to this leading school of business training. Then, too, there is the $50 deposit at the First National Bank of Glendale, two other $50 prizes and three $25 prizes.

The first week of the contest is but half over and there's still ample time for you to make a start. To enter the first thing to do is to cut the nomination blank on page four of this issue and have it filed at the News office. After you have done this, thoroughly plan your campaign. Cut out the free coupon which appears in each issue of The News. Make out a classified list of your friends. Find out whether they take The News. If some of them are not subscribers, secure their subscription or the promise of the same, if they are already subscribers get their renewal, for subscriptions to the Glendale Evening News means votes, and votes are what you need to win the Maxwell auto or any one of the valuable prizes.

For any further information phone or call at the News office.

NEW WRINKLES

A simple and splendid filling for pin cushions can be made of dried coffee grounds, which do not pack down and never rust the needles.

Butter and sugar to be creamed for cake or hard sauce can quickly be reduced to the right consistency by the aid of a wooden potato masher. First warm the mixing bowl before putting in the ingredients; then mash and the result is a light, creamy mass with half the usual labor.

An excellent way to clean a hairbrush is to take one-half cupful of salt and flour in equal proportions, mix and rub through the bristles of the brush two or three times. Shake the mixture all out and the brush will be as clean as new. This is better than washing the brush, for it does not soften the bristles.

To rid canaries of the parasites which affect them, place a clean white cloth over the cage at night. In the morning it will be covered with very minute red spots, almost invisible without a microscope, which are the vermin so annoying and fatal to birds. Burn the cloth and repeat if necessary.

The law of nations should be revised so as to conform more nearly to the Golden Rule.

THE KALEM COMPANY

NO MOTION PICTURE COMPANY WILL HAVE BETTER EQUIPPED STAGE

Kalem actors, under the able direction of Mr. Horne, are working on the third series of "The Secret Code." Mr. Horne expects to finish with it tomorrow. The electricians, who have been busy installing the big Kleig lights on the new stage, expect to finish the work this week. When that has been done there will be no stage in the country better equipped than the Kalem. The company under the direction of Mr. Davis, which is producing the series known as "The Hazards of Helen," is still busily engaged in that work.

Miss Tannahill of New York, who has been in Glendale for some time taking part in the Kalem production, "The Girl and the Angel," having completed her engagement, has gone on to San Francisco, whence she will return to New York City.

ROBBED THE RAILWAY

It is believed by the Glendale police that a gang of thieves has been operating in the neighborhood of Glendale for some time past. There have been various robberies and thefts that are strongly suspected to have been the work of this daring gang, but the work of rounding them up has been slow, as evidence strong enough to convict them has not been forthcoming.

Some days ago, however, Chief Herald was notified that a man conveying gunny sacks containing sections of copper wire had been found on the Glendale-Montrose electric car and was being held for arrest. The chief got the man and had him arraigned and charged with the theft. On examination he stated that his name was Luis Rodriguez Torres and asserted that he had found the wire buried in the bed of the wash. Judge Whomes and the police doubted this statement and the officers proceeded to round up the suspects and succeeded in getting A. Garcia into custody and in connecting him with the robbery.

Mr. J. W. M. Burton of the Glendale-Montrose railway, made the charge, and on trial both men were found guilty and sentenced to pay fines of $30 each or to suffer 30 days' imprisonment. They were given until the first of July to pay the fines. Both men work for the Putnam Stone Construction company and that corporation paid half their fines and agreed to see that they pay the balance in time. It appears that both men are excellent workmen and have been led astray in some manner. The pursuit of the gang still goes on.

TROPICO

Thursday, June 24, just one week from today, will be one of the biggest, if not the biggest, day Tropico has ever seen or will ever see, for on that date Visor lodge, Knights of Pythias of this city, ably assisted by the Knights of Glendale, will hold a street carnival on San Fernando road, in the business center of the city.

Many are the attractions that are to be offered for the pleasure of the several thousand visitors who will be present from Los Angeles and all of the adjacent country side. The D. O. K. K., favorably known as the "Dokeys," which numbers 1000 members, are to give their famous ceremonial. This ceremonial has never been given but in three cities of California, Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego, and Tropico will feel the honor very keenly for being thus favored by this splendid organization of the flower of the Knighthood.

Supt. Kennedy of the municipal playgrounds is arranging some very clever and attractive amusements for Thursday afternoon.

The famous White Squadron patrol of the Glendale Elks will give a drill on the street that evening.

The local Pythian Sisters will give a cafeteria dinner. These dinners are noted for their excellency, for these ladies are adepts in the culinary art. The city trustees of Tropico subscribed $50 to aid the carnival managers. The committee has arranged a large number of fine attractions. There is one pleasant feature connected with this great event and that is there will be no concession permitted on the streets unless under the personal supervision of the Knights of Pythias. Tropico is beginning to don her most gala attire for this carnival.

Every time Carranza looks in the mirror he is convinced that he sees Mexico's "man of the hour."

The practice of thrift and good management take much of the hardness out of hard times.

PROGRESS OF SCHOOL

"THE STYLUS," PUBLISHED BY SENIOR HIGH CLASS SHOWS MARKED ADVANCE

From title page to the last blank autograph columns "The Stylus" is a credit to the Senior Class of Glendale Union High School. It is quite an ambitious volume for a senior class to publish and there are not lacking indications in its pages that the seniors found its publication a considerable burden to carry along with their studies. At the same time there can be no doubt that they found pleasure and profit in the work.

As a specimen of typographical work and the engraver's art the book could not be excelled by any school. The cover is chaste and striking in design and in keeping with the rest of the publication. The topography is of the first order and the book is profusely illustrated with half tones of every feature of school life and pictures of each member of the class. Printed on fine surfaced stock both the text and the illustrations stand out in fine relief.

The Stylus is dedicated to the Senior Class teacher, Aleck Leroy Ferguson, whose picture appropriately adorns the dedication page. In their "Foreword" the seniors say that this book is intended as a record of the entire school, representative in all its sections and also as a memorial of the graduating class. That they have faithfully and successfully carried out this idea speaks from every page of the magazine. Tastefully conceived panel groups of members of the class, showing also different views of the school buildings adorn the opening pages. These excellently clear cuts will long remain to testify to the thoroughness of the manner in which the seniors of 1915 conceived and carried out their editorial and publishing task.

Each member of the class is designated by some epigram that marks out his or her personality. The activities of each are also noted. The epigrams are humorous, but never unkindly nor sarcastic, though there was here temptation to be funny at the expense of others. Indeed good nature and good fellowship seem to be characteristics of this senior class. A glance at the paneled group cut that shows the members of the editorial staff of "The Stylus" shows a number of intelligent and clear-headed young people. They deserve credit for their excellent work. Their names are as follows: Gilbert A. Cowan, editor in chief; Basil O. Boon, business manager; Margaret Harrison, art editor; Harriet Hanawalt, assistant editor; Florence Wheeler, assistant art editor; Purman Bennett, literary editor; Donald Cowlin, assistant art editor; Merle Oliver, alumni editor; Monty Coole, athletic editor; Lynn McNutt, department editor; Essie Hamilton, organizations editor; H. Darwin Kirschman, advertising manager; Inez McKinney, calendar editor; Vivian Engle, exchange editor; Josephine Starr, society editor; Chester Kilgore, photo editor; Wallace Cramer, class editor; Merlin Wilson, stylites editor; Stephen Hayland, assistant advertising manager.

That the work done by the members of this staff was no sinecure speaks in every page of this interesting production. Much of the work done here is naturally of ephemeral interest and also of purely personal and class interest; but much of it is also of interest to a wider circle. There are friends, parents, relatives of the senior class and of the whole school who will be pleased to have such a souvenir of the school. In after years the seniors themselves will be glad to have this publication on which to look back and by which to measure their growth.

All graduating classes have a tendency to think furtively that as they seem to know a great deal that some members of the past generation never had a chance to learn they have "finished" their education. If such were the case there would be no progress, no development. "The Stylus" will serve the useful purpose of a standard by which advance can be marked. It is safe to prophesy that five years hence a proportion of the graduating seniors while looking with loving interest on this record of their studies, their sports and their relationships to each other, will say, "Is it possible that that was myself?"

It is to be noted that in one of the editorials the belief is expressed that the student body of Glendale Union High School should stand sponsor for the issuance of the Stylus. At present the Stylus is supposed to be published by the Senior class. This seems to be unfair to the class and the school. This is a school paper and should have representation from the entire school on its staff. The

MISGOVERNMENT OF ALASKA

If the thirteen original colonies had had as much disability thrust upon them as Alaska has suffered since its purchase, at the hands of incompetency in Washington, D. C., they would have rebelled and sought their independence long before they did. For a long time the mining laws under which Alaska had to work were extremely unsuitable to its needs; but no remedy could be had. So strong was public feeling against the injustices that were inflicted on the country that meetings were held in various parts of that vast territory to protest against the Washington rule. At some of those meetings secession was boldly proposed. Naturally strong bodied and strong minded Alaskans objected to being misgoverned by some petty bureaucrat in the capitol seven thousand miles away. The bureaucrat, however, always has had the best of it. He was on the spot and the Alaskan 7000 miles away, shut off sometimes by impassable ice, if he lived in Seward peninsula; by storm and tempest if he lived in southeastern Alaska, and in both cases by the enormous distance.

Details of the mistakes of Washington, D. C., in dealing with Alaska would make interesting reading. In some cases they would be ludicrous. It must be remembered, however, that what seems ludicrous, in a climate like California becomes desperately exasperating in a climate where the thermometer frequently registers 60 and 70 below zero and where there is no access to the "outside" during eight months of the year, unless by a dog-sled trip of 1300 miles.

Recent investigations made in Washington, D. C., at the instance of a man who wished to lease an island in the Alaskan archipelago for use as a fox farm disclosed the fact that though he corresponded with three different departments in Washington, D. C., for months, he could not find any one with authority to give him the desired permission.

Finally Secretary of the Interior Lane investigated the matter and discovered that islands in Alaska are controlled by one department; forests by a second; roads by a third; fisheries by a fourth; railroads by a fifth; while the black bear is under the jurisdiction of one department and the brown under another.

Is it any wonder that the man who desired the fox farm gave up the idea in despair and disgust, or that the people of Valdez who applied for a town site in 1889 did not get it until 1912. Thus are we fearfully and wonderfully governed. Let not Glendale despair. Her civic system is far ahead of what prevails in the north.

ENORMOUS COST OF WAR

Let the United States take heed. It is costing Britain alone $15,000,000 a day to conduct the present war with the German allies. Think of it! Think of the good that might be done with such a sum as that. It is no mere Judas-like cant to say this. The vastness of the sum itself takes it out of the category of ordinary moneys.

Britain is not yet at the end of its expenditures either. The British premier, Mr. Asquith, says that the situation is without parallel in the history of the British empire. At the same time he manifests characteristic immobility in the face of such a critical juncture. He acknowledges the gravity of the task before the nation and does not seek to minimize either the courage or the military capacity of the German allies; but he expresses himself, speaking for the British nation, with confidence as to the future.

There is no sign in Asquith's speech of any premature desire for peace. There is nothing to indicate that he thinks the war is going to come to an end soon; but there is the note of assured determination to bring it to an end by the triumph of the British arms. Meanwhile the British premier does not conceal from the nation that it must face even greater sacrifices than it has heretofore made.

The lesson of all this is that the United States should take heed to itself. It has "waxed fat" and is a tempting prey to some of the lean but well-armed and burglarious nations that are practically at its doors. Not long ago the kaiser made the statement that Germany could land 200,000 fully equipped troops on the Atlantic coast of the United States in ten days. Before this country could collect from California, Texas and other ends of the continent the 30,000 regular troops that constitute the standing army of this country within its own bounds, an aggressive enemy could seize New York and other eastern cities and hold them to enormous ransom without the slightest chance of our retaliating, much less defending ourselves. Think, if it is costing Great Britain $15,000,000 a day to conduct this war, with all her preparedness and her resources what would it cost a country entirely unprepared like the United States.

Of course, if this country is prepared, as Bryan and other pacifists would fain have it, to submit meekly to whatever outside countries might see fit to impose on it, then Americans may as well at once give up "their place in the sun" to some other land that will appreciate it and be prepared to defend it. Preparedness is not aggressiveness; defense is not defiance. When even armed valor like that of Belgium is of no avail before a ruthless and enormously strong invader, what chance would the defenseless citizens of this land have in a cyclone of blood and iron?

CONCERNING JOURNALISTIC CREDIBILITY

In the practice of some foreign courts when a witness is put on oath he is asked to swear not only that he will tell the truth, but also that he will tell the "whole truth and nothing but the truth." If some newspapers were to be forced to act in their publication of news on that principle they would be compelled to omit what constitutes a great deal of animated reading. The public of Glendale, however, is probably wise enough to discount a great deal of what appears concerning this city in the columns of some of the Los Angeles newspapers, and that interesting reading may continue, as far as they are concerned, no matter how little of the truth may be told.

The old slogan of the New York Sun used to be: "If you see it in the Sun, it's so." A simple reversal of the phrase would suit some of our journalistic neighbors as far as news of Glendale is concerned. Glendale citizens may be sure that if they see news detrimental to this city in certain Los Angeles papers—it's not so.

It is probable that the greater proportion of Glendale's citizenship is fully aware of the plans and wishes of certain elements in Los Angeles that are in touch with certain elements in Glendale. The snare is openly spread in the sight of the local birds; but, unlike Solomon's proverbial feathered fools, they are not going to walk into the meshes. At the same time constant dropping wears out the stone and constant iteration of statements concerning this city, that are intended to be detrimental to its peace and harmony might have an effect on the unwary. Scan the papers of the metropolis with care; read them with intelligence; and use your own judgment concerning Glendale.

Here is a city that is going on quietly and peaceably. It has no real grievances. It has, it may be asserted, no grievances that will not yield to sensible treatment or that cannot be cured under local care. Let no influence, however powerful or persuasive, induce you to give credit for a moment to the insinuation that there is anything wrong with the civic government of Glendale. Attend the meetings of your civic council—the Board of Trustees—and see for yourself the business-like manner in which your city's business is conducted; the care and intelligence bestowed on pressing civic questions and the uniform desire on the part of all the trustees to serve the best interests of the people.

When you have convinced yourself of the good intentions of your delegates in the board and also of their intelligence and capacity, you will be in a position to understand that statements that appear in any neighboring journal hinting at division or inharmonious in the civic life of Glendale must emanate from some source that is interested in spreading such misstatements.

Ask yourself what is the meaning of all this outside anxiety about Glendale. You will not have far to go to find the answer. Two elements may always be counted on in the course of civic development, the opposition of the "outs" and the machinations of others with personal purposes to serve. Discounting these two elements Glendale has an overwhelming majority in favor of living its own life; keeping within its own bounds and developing on its own lines.

seniors very rightly plead that in their closing year they have many class affairs to which they must attend and that they should not be asked to devote their time and spend their money on a book for the school.

This seems reasonable and might well receive the attention of the governing body of the school. The Student Body might easily assume this responsibility and in this way the seniors would be set free to pursue the important studies of their last year. In this as in other matters the student body may need some stimulus.

Among many interesting sketches in "The Stylus" may be noted an article on the school and its development. It takes the reader back to the time when Glendale was an open country devoted to fruit growing and ranching. It traces its development into a village without a school. The young people then had to go into Los Angeles if they wanted an education. Many are suffering to the present hour from that disability.

When the idea of erecting a high school in Glendale was conceived it was speedily carried out. Other adjoining villages, considering this plan favorably, united with Glendale in a bond issue of $10,000 for the construction and equipment of a building large enough to accommodate all the students of Glendale and the adjacent territory. The first high school was erected on the site where the First National Bank now stands. In 1902 that building was opened with 29 students and two teachers. During that time the population increased so rapidly that the citizens perceived that a larger building would be necessary. In 1908 bonds for $60,000 were voted and a large building on the corner of Fifth and Maryland was purchased, and additional teachers were obtained. By 1914 this building was largely outgrown and a new bond issue of $100,000 was voted and two splendid buildings were erected. The one adjoining the old building is used for household work and fine arts, while the other is devoted to mechanical work.

It is interesting to note that the students, through the student body govern themselves, elect a speaker of the house and a secretary. The senate passes all bills before they can become laws. The executive board helps to enforce the laws passed by the student body.

The number of illustrations in this volume will always make it a source of delight to its possessors. Here are views of all the buildings and of their interior. Principal Moyse is seen seated in his office, the interior of the fine auditorium is here, the library, the music room, the various art rooms and the sewing rooms.

What will prove interesting to those who believe in the pursuit of household science at school is a view of the elementary cooking room and the dining room in the model bungalow.

Friends of the scholars and specially of the graduating class will mark with interest the cartoons which are the work of the students. These are creditable, showing not only skill in the mechanical part but also a strong sense of artistic humor. These budding artists should give a good account of themselves in the world.

Glendale is proud of its High School athletic record. It has produced at least one rising pitcher in the baseball arena, and is sending forth in this senior class Hastings Bidwell, an all-round athlete, who, in the State Interscholastic Prep meet at Fresno, tied with Thompson of Long Beach in the high jump, with the remarkable record of 6 ft. 2 in.

A great deal of interesting matter remains to be noticed and our readers, if they do not possess a copy of "The Stylus," will doubtless be interested in much of it. This paper may return to the subject once more at least. Meanwhile it is pleasing to be able to give hearty commendation to the work of the senior class in this publication. There is much clever verse in the pages and if the feet need strengthening here and there that is not unusual in the work of youthful verse writers.

Altogether "The Stylus" will remain a testimony to the many excellent qualities of the students of the Senior class of 1915.

NORTH GLENDAL E

LINCOLN'S DEFENSE OF HIS DE-CREPIT ARMCHAIR

The late Robert R. Hitt, who was at one time a representative in congress from one of the Illinois districts, and who, earlier, was charge d'affaires at Paris, as well as assistant secretary of state, when he was a member of congress, probably the only representative who had personal knowledge of the now traditional debates between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas in Illinois in 1858, and who, furthermore, had intimate personal acquaintance with Lincoln himself. Mr. Hitt, when a young man, learned stenography, and he was chosen as the official stenographer to report the debates between Lincoln and Douglas. When he had written out his notes, he was accustomed to show the manuscript to Lincoln and to Douglas so that there might be opportunity to correct the notes. In this way he was brought into close relations with both, especially with Lincoln.

Mr. Hitt had a fund of interesting anecdotes about Lincoln, and when he was in the mood he would, in a quiet, gentle and sometimes almost reverent manner relate some of his experiences.

Somebody—it may have been John Hay—once told Mr. Hitt of a little incident that occurred in the White House where Lincoln did most of his work. "As reported to me," Mr. Hitt, in repeating the anecdote was accustomed to say, "it was only a few days after Lincoln's second inauguration that after a cabinet meeting one of the members of the cabinet happened to notice the arm chair which was placed at the head of the table and in which Lincoln sat during cabinet meetings or when he was at work throughout the four years of his first administration. The chair was dilapidated. It seemed so rickety that it was wondered whether it would be safe longer to sit in it, and the cabinet officer said: 'It seems to me that the United States ought to furnish the president of the United States with a respectable chair.' Thereupon the president turned to the chair and said: 'What is the matter with that chair? Poor as it may be there is a considerable number of men in the United States who would be perfectly willing to occupy it.'

"I presume," Mr. Hitt would say, "that Lincoln used his chair according to his custom. He was fond of wearing slippers, and he used often to meet his cabinet or, in fact, visit them still wearing slippers. It was an old-time custom of his to throw his leg over the arm of the chair, and I presume he often did that when seated in the chair that was at the head of the table. He was a pretty heavy man and his legs were long, and it may be that for this reason the chair got pretty rough usage, but the answer which he made to his cabinet officer was perfectly characteristic of him, and he often used to speak with his dry humor of what he called the presidential grub, which, he would say, never could be driven from a man after it had got into his mental system."

OPEN DOOR CLOSING

(By Frank A. Coffin.)

PACIFIC UNION COLLEGE (St. Helena), June 17.—(Special).—The Japanese government has adopted a proposal made by the governor general of Korea to eliminate the teaching of Christianity from every Korean school, whether denominational or otherwise, according to the statement of Elder A. G. Daniells, president of the General or World conference of the Seventh-day Adventists, to the National Educational and Young People's Missionary Volunteer Council of the Adventists, now in session here. Elder Daniells has just returned from a year's tour of Australia, the South Sea Islands and the Orient. He said the "open door" in Japan, so far as Protestant missionary endeavor is concerned, is fast closing, that a reaction has set in, and urged that whatever is done for the evangelization of China and India's millions must be done quickly as Japan is leading the Orient.

"Bishop Bashford, representing the interests of the Methodist Episcopal church in Korea, returned to America upon the same steamer I came on, to present to President Wilson an appeal that he protest to Japan against this action debarring Bible instruction from denominational schools," said the speaker. "The act which has passed gives 10 years for the closing of our schools, but those who read it and are familiar with the situation say it may be only five years until our schools will be closed, for the Japanese government has set itself to establish Shintoism, which elevates the Mikado to the position of supreme ruler, and makes the state religion the supreme religion."

"Japan is bent on conquest. Already she has Manchuria and Korea, and has made demands upon China. Japan holds that the supreme duty of every man is to the state, in times of war or peace, and she is determined that nothing shall divide the attentions of the people, and share with the state the place of supremacy. She does not propose to have her young people taught that there is a God above the kingdom of Japan, or a being above the Mikado of Japan, and that is why she proposes to rule the Bible and religion out of the schools. I have talked with various missionaries in Japan, and the universal opinion seems to be that Japan has taken a reactionary step, and that from this time on it will be much harder to carry on gospel work in that empire."

President Daniells said the whole Orient is awake as never before. "In olden days 20,000 students gathered at Nanking for their examinations, each occupying a little stall three feet wide, five feet long and six feet high. The student sat on a board and wrote on another; and that was all the furniture in these rooms. I saw the grass growing knee high through all those great, long rows, and thousands of bricks are being taken from those stalls and built into modern buildings, where a modern system of education prevails.

"Those Oriental peoples know how to be Christians as well as any one else in the world, and God knows how to make them Christians," he continued. "While the Buddhist looks forward to 'nirvana,' total annihilation, the blessed hope which the gospel places before the heathen world is eternal life through Jesus Christ."

The Seventh-day Adventists have 400 baptized believers in Fiji, Elder Daniells said—no longer naked, illiterate cannibals, the dread of every mariner compelled from shortage of water or food to touch at that island of the South Seas, but "clothed, quiet and cultured," attending church services, reading their Bibles like the whites, and in every way as faithful and conscientious in their conduct. President Daniells visited Fiji on his trip. He remarked that when he passed the island on a trip to Australia 23 years before, he was the third Adventist minister south of the equator, but that now the Adventists have representatives and thousands of adherents scattered throughout the entire southern hemisphere.

Nearly two score more missionaries for China during the next year is the plan President Daniells has proposed to the council, reading an earnest appeal from missionaries now in that country telling of the tremendous work they are doing with comparatively few European laborers. China must have help or much will be lost, he said. This appeal will be presented to the general conference committee.

The educational council adopted a plan yesterday for the establishment of a church school in every church of the denomination having six or more children of school age. The young people's organization voted to prepare booklets on Bible doctrines and denominational history.

If selfish ambition and desire to plunder were winnowed out of the troubles in Mexico, there would be very little trouble left.

If everybody, at all times, were scrupulously careful with fire, California would suffer comparatively little loss from this source.
